Here are a few things to consider when choosing a keyboard:

- Number of keys: The number of keys on a keyboard determines the range of notes you can play. Most keyboards have 61 keys, which is enough for most beginners. However, if you're planning on playing more advanced music, you may want to consider a keyboard with 76 or 88 keys.
- Weighted keys: Weighted keys feel more like the keys on a real piano, which can be helpful for developing proper technique. However, weighted keys can also be more expensive than non-weighted keys.
- Auto accompaniment features: Make sure the keyboard you choose has the auto accompaniment features you need. Some keyboards only offer basic auto accompaniment features, while others offer more advanced features such as programmable rhythms and song recording.
- Price: Keyboards can range in price from a few hundred dollars to several thousand dollars. It's important to set a budget before you start shopping so that you don't overspend.

Once you've chosen a keyboard, it's time to learn how to use the built-in auto accompaniment features. Most keyboards have a dedicated auto accompaniment section, which usually includes buttons for selecting chords, rhythms, and styles.

Here's a brief overview of the most common auto accompaniment features:

- Chords: Chords are the building blocks of music. Auto accompaniment features allow you to play chords with just a few simple keystrokes. Most keyboards have a variety of chord presets, so you can easily find the chords you need for your song.
- Rhythms: Rhythms are the backbone of music. Auto accompaniment features allow you to play rhythms with just a few simple keystrokes. Most keyboards have a variety of rhythm presets, so you can easily find the rhythm you need for your song.
- Styles: Styles are pre-programmed combinations of chords and rhythms. Auto accompaniment features allow you to select a style that matches the mood of your song. Most keyboards have a variety of style presets, so you can easily find the style you need for your song.

Now that you know how to use the built-in auto accompaniment features, it's time to start playing chords and rhythms.

Here are a few tips for playing chords:

- Use your left hand to play chords. This will free up your right hand to play the melody.
- Start with simple chords. There are many different types of chords, but you can start with the basic major and minor chords.
- Practice transitioning between chords smoothly. The smoother your transitions, the more musical your playing will sound.

Here are a few tips for playing rhythms:

- Use your right hand to play rhythms. This will free up your left hand to play the chords.
- Start with simple rhythms. There are many different types of rhythms, but you can start with the basic quarter note rhythm.
- Practice keeping a steady beat. The steadier your beat, the more musical your playing will sound.

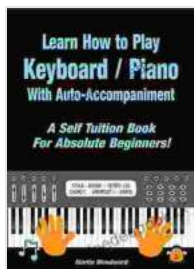

Once you've mastered playing chords and rhythms, it's time to put it all together and play your favorite songs.

Here are a few tips for playing songs with auto accompaniment:

- Start with simple songs. Choose songs that have a simple chord progression and a basic rhythm.
- Practice the song slowly. This will help you to develop accuracy and muscle memory.
- Gradually increase the speed. As you become more comfortable with the song, you can start to play it faster.
- Add embellishments. Once you've mastered the basic song, you can start to add embellishments such as fills and solos.

Playing keyboard piano with auto accompaniment is a great way to enjoy music without having to learn how to read sheet music. By following the tips in this guide, you can quickly learn how to use the built-in features on your keyboard and play your favorite songs.
